Nazi Restriction Affects Every Phase Of Jewish Life In Europe

NO END TO GERMAN INVENTIVENESS IN OPPRESSION

What appears to be an effort to create class distinction among dwellers in the Polish ghettoes has been made by the Nazis in Lublin, where a new "first class" ghetto for the Jewish "elite" working in Nazi controlled factories, farms, and offices has been set up.

The Jews in this new ghetto are permitted to leave its bounds for the purpose of going to work, and must return as soon as their work is finished. They are forbidden any contact with the Jews in the "inferior" ghetto, according to the London Jewish Chronicle.

Official Polish figures in the pre-war period showed that about 18,000 Jewish marriages took place every year. Last year, the figure for the whole of Poland was only 500. In the Warsaw ghetto, in 1941, 150 marriages were recorded. In several other ghettoes there were none at all.

Only eight children were born in the second quarter of 1941 in the Lodz ghetto, which now has a population of 150,000.

Although the Gestapo ordered the closing of all Jewish schools in Poland, they have not succeeded in depriving the young people of education.

A system has been organized by which elementary and high school teaching is carried on secretly. The children are organized into small classes of five or six, meeting in a different place every day. Textbooks are either written by hand or typed, and travelling teachers go from town to town, staying a few weeks in each place. These teachers specialize in one subject, and when the next teacher arrives, turn to another.

So successful is the system that plans are now being made for introducing university education. In some ghettoes, young people are already reading for a degree in history.

Reporting that the coal-mines in Kladno, in the Czech Protectorate, had started work, the Neue Tag, of Prague, commented that the first shift consisted of Jews. The Nazi occupation authorities in Belgium have drafted 700 Jews to work in the coal-mines at Liege and Charleroi. They have to work ten hours a day, and their pay is not even sufficient to provide them with food.

Twenty thousand Jews, aged 20 to 30, have been brought from Germany to the Pinsk district for forced labour. The Jews will be compelled to dry the swamps and to work on the land.

A Russian prisoner of war, who succeeded in escaping from a camp for Russian prisoners of war at Bortapel, states (according to Soviet War News, the bulletin issued by the Soviet Embassy in London) that it was the practice there, when new prisoners of war or arrested civilians were brought in, for a German officer to demand that the Jews among them should be named. But the men all remained silent. The enraged officer would then pick out the prisoners he considered to be Jews, order them to take off their clothes and go into a pen where they were kept without food, doomed to death from starvation.

In a letter to his brother-in-law in Germany, which was intercepted by the Russians, a German soldier, named Christin, a guard in a camp for Soviet prisoners, confessed that in the district south of Kiev where his unit was stationed, the Nazis had already shot about 13,000 Jews. "You cannot," he wrote, "imagine the conditions in this camp."

One hundred and twenty prominent Rumanian Jews have been seized as hostages for "Jewish acts of sabotage," it is reported by the Berlin correspondent of the Svenska Dagbladet, of Stockholm. They include Dr. Wilhelm Filderman, former President of the dissolved Union of Jewish Communities in Old Rumania, and Dr. Schafran, Chief Rabbi of Bucharest. The hostages were called together at the largest Synagogue in Bucharest, where the decision was conveyed to them by the secretary of the so-called "Jewish Centre." They are permitted for the present to remain at home and may move freely about the capital.

It was made compulsory for Rumanian Jews aged 18 to 35 to do ten days' snow-clearing work. They were not paid for their work, nor was the food provided for them. Jews will be exempted from the work provided they pay large sums as an alternative.

The Rumanian Government has raised the prices of food for Jews in the country by 25 per cent. The extra money will not go to the shopkeepers, but to the Rumanian War Fund.

1,200 Refugees To Leave Europe Soon

Some 1,200 persons will be evacuated by the Joint Distribution Committee between now and May 15th, it was disclosed by Joseph C. Hyman, Executive Vice-Chairman of the J.D.C. Counting those sailing on two Portuguese vessels for the Western Hemisphere within the next month, about 5,000 refugees will have emigrated from Europe since Pearl Harbor with J.D.C. help.

The J.D.C., which receives its funds from the campaign collections of the United Jewish Appeal for Refugees, Overseas Needs and Palestine, has provided transportation for a continuous stream of refugees from the Old to the New World throughout the period since America's entry into the war. "When America entered the war, the J.D.C. geared its services overseas and in America to meet the new emergency. For a long time it had conducted a high-speed rescue operation for thousands of refugees in Europe and Africa holding visas for the United States or Latin American countries. It arranged for transportation by buying up bulk or total space on neutral boats, which insured sailing at specific times and averted the threat of expiring visas."

The J.D.C., Mr. Hyman declared, has taken financial risks, sometimes as high as $400,000 a boat, each time it contracts for a sailing. "The J.D.C.'s risk lies in the fact that it pays in advance for space which may have to remain empty if any one of a thousand untoward circumstances prevents passengers from embarking," he said. "But unless it took those risks there would be no assurance that boats would cross the Atlantic to carry all who could escape."

Referring to the fact that the U.S. Treasury Department continues to grant licenses to the J.D.C. to pay out transportation fares, Mr. Hyman said:

"Since Pearl Harbor the J.D.C. has paid out $3,336,000 for transportation fares under U.S. Treasury licenses. The Visa Division of the State Department continues to issue visas for the United States

U.S. War Aid Roster To Enlist 6,000 Aliens

A roster of loyal aliens of all nationalities, qualified for special vocations, is being taken to make their services available for the war work of the government, it is announced by the Immigrants Conference at the office of Aufbau, German-Jewish weekly, at 67 West Forty-fourth Street, New York.

The organization in collaboration with the National Refugee Service obtained 1,000 replies to 2,600 application blanks sent out since the beginning of the drive, according to Dr. Fausto R. Pitigliani, chairman of the group. It is expected that 6,000 specialists in various fields will be enlisted.

The questionnaire was sent to physicians, nurses, engineers, architects, chemists, pharmacists, laboratory technicians, statisticians and economists. Of these, 230 doctors, 220 engineers and 170 economists have answered the eighteen questions regarding knowledge of English, citizenship, personal and professional references, and experience.

A spokesman for the group said that preparation of the roster had been welcomed by the government, which in the case of specialists does not distinguish between aliens and citizens if their services are available. However, objections have been raised to non-citizens by labor unions and employers, it was said.

Hope was expressed that the American people would approve "wholeheartedly" of this effort to mobilize these forces among the alien population in the interest of the common war aim.

British Industry Enriched Through Refugees

Just as Louis XIV's revocation, in 1685, of Henry IV's Edict of Nantes promulgated in 1598 resulted in inestimable benefit to English industry, so, also, in a way, has Hitler's overrunning of the Continent and oppression of the peoples of the countries he has occupied.

Terrible persecution and expatriation under Louis of the Protestants, to whom Henry had accorded tolerance, drove large numbers of them to take refuge in England, where they introduced new crafts and industries. Now British industry has been enriched by new methods and designs in manufactures brought by Continental refugees.

Typical of this is an exhibition recently held in London of pro-

Author Urges Trust Instead Of Racial Bias

A warning that America's war effort will not operate smoothly and efficiently until Americans learn to trust and believe in each other regardless of race or religion was voiced by Pearl S. Buck, author and authority on China, at a mass meeting in New York.

Other speakers at the meeting, which was sponsored by the Council on African Affairs, Inc., of which Paul Robeson is chairman, were Herbert Agar, editor of "The Louisville Courier Journal" and president of Freedom House; Dr. Max Yergan, executive director of the council; Miss Lillian Hellman, playwright, and Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union, an affiliate of the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

"The cause of uncertainty in the American people now," Miss Buck told the gathering, "is not lack of unity, it is lack of trust in each other. We all want the same thing, all of us, Gentiles and Jews, black and white, Catholic and Protestant, North and South, East and West, but we are not sure of each other's democracy. We distrust the genuineness not only of the individual but men of the class of race. Thus labor distrusts capital and capital certainly distrusts labor. The Jew distrusts the Gentile and the Gentile distrusts the Jew. Black distrusts white and white distrusts black—that is, they distrust the democratic determination in the other.

"We carry each of us in our hearts a torch of democracy, our belief in democracy as the hope of the human race, but we cannot see the torch burning in another's heart, and we ask ourselves, Is it [illegible] of uniting against the enemy, we are fearful lest the enemy is in our capital, in our town, and even next door to us."

But in achieving that force of belief in each other, Miss Buck said, the tools of democracy, such as freedom of speech, must not be abandoned.

"If we cannot speak, if we cannot complain, if we cannot criticize and suggest and demand," she asserted, "we give up the war for democracy before it is ever carried beyond our own gates."

200 Send Blum Birthday Cable Hailing Stand For Freedom

Two hundred American writers, journalists, physicians, radio commentators, lawyers, playwrights, college presidents, clergymen, educators, editors, artists, publishers and government officials sent a cable message to Leon Blum, former leader of the French Popular Front, who has spent nearly two years in prison as one of the accused in the war-guilt trial at Riom.

"The undersigned Americans, on the occasion of your seventieth birthday," the message read, "wish to express to you their sympathetic greetings, and their admiration of your courageous stand in the cause of freedom and democracy."

The signers included Governor Lehman, Albert Einstein, Arthur Capper, Louis Bromfield, John Dewey, Edna Ferber, Dorothy Canfield Fisher, Fannie Hurst, Marquis James, Dorothy Thompson, Christopher Morley, Vincent Sheehan, Upton Sinclair, Archibald MacLeish, Sigrid Undset (Norwegian), Donald Richberg, Arthur Garfield Hays, George Gordon Battle, the Rt. Rev. Edward L. Parsons, Bishop Frank J. McConnell, Lin Yutang, Major George Fielding Eliot, Professor Franz Boas, Thomas H. Benton, Roger Baldwin, George S. Kaufman, Eddie Cantor, Raymond Gram Swing, Walter Damrosch, William Green, Dr. Bela Schick and John Haynes Holmes.

A message was sent to M. Blum by Samuel Shore, vice president of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, as chairman of the Labor Division, Citizens for Victory, 8 West Fortieth Street, representing A. F. of L., C. I. O. and Railroad Brotherhood unions, greeting him on his birthday as a "stalwart champion of labor's rights whose prosecution is an [illegible]

Last Bullets, Poison Gas Saved For Jews, Says Nazi Press

CLAIM EVEN GERMAN DEFEAT WILL NOT BRING RELIEF

Addressing a meeting at Posen (Poznan), the head of the Nazi Labor Front, Dr. Ley, said that though Germany was conducting war operations on various fronts, the principal war was directed against the Jews, and hence Germany was determined to go on fighting until the destruction of Jewry was achieved.

Broadcasting on the Purim festival, the Nazi radio said that the Jews living in the countries under German domination were not able to celebrate it this year as a Jewish victory against the "Aryans." The Fuhrer, declared the Nazi spokesman, had converted this year's Purim into a day of mourning for the Jews, and particularly for those in the ghettoes. Moreover, he meant to see to it that the Jews should never be able to celebrate Purim again.

Jewish and Polish workers in the Reich receive twenty-five per cent less wages than German workers, and labor authorities are instructed as far as possible to utilize the services of Jews only for unskilled work. As is the case of prisoners of war, Jews may be put to work only in groups. The national labor exchanges have authority, in exceptional cases, to vary this ruling; but even Jews who are employed individually have to be kept apart from other workers.

Employers are encouraged to call on Poles and Jews to work on official holidays, and they are frequently obliged to work overtime and on Sundays. Unlike German workers, they receive no special pay for this.

No payment is made to Poles or Jews, either, for days of enforced idleness due to shortage of raw materials, transport difficulties or breakdown of plant—matters of almost daily occurrence in this third year of the war. In cases of sickness payment to Poles and Jews is not continued even for a single day.

In the case of an accident to a Polish worker not due to his own negligence, the employer is permitted, but not compelled to continue paying his wages. A Jew in similar circumstances may be paid only the minimum allowance sufficient to keep him alive.

Western European workers employed in Germany are now finding that the measures originally enforced against Poles and Jews are now being gradually applied to all foreign workers in the Reich.

The Nazi press has given prominence to a statement by Goebbels regretting the German Government's past action in allowing tens of thousands of Jews to leave countries under the control of Germany to become the principal "war agitators" in Britain and America. But, say the Nazis, the Jews, especially those locked up in the ghettoes, are entertaining false hopes if they believe that a defeat of Germany will bring them relief.

Germany, they declare, has the means of destroying the Jews before she will be kept in reserve for the realization of Hitler's prophecy that this war is to result in the destruction of the Jews so that they can never again celebrate a victory over Germany.

How Housewives Can Best Serve

Canadian housewives, biggest army unit on the home front, are asking, "How can we best serve?"

The consumer branch of Wartime Prices and Trade Board advises:

Buy as carefully and intelligently as you know how.

Don't be a hoarder, or start rumors about impending shortages. You can create shortages that way.

Don't waste anything. Salvage anything you can.

Get as much out of your possessions as possible.

If you cannot use something you have, or make it over, give it to someone who can use it.

Step up saving war savings certificates and stamps as possible.

Make gardens work for national health. No fancy gardens this year! Canadians are urged to put gardening emphasis on maximum nutrition, and conservation of seed, garden tools and time. A good neighbour policy is advised, sharing tools, dividing packets of seed and exchanging produce.

Family tastes must be considered. The following vegetables, all rich in vitamin content, will serve as a guide as to what to plant: tomatoes, lettuce, turnip greens, chard, cabbage, kale, onions, beets, carrots, potatoes, rutabaga, peas, parsnips.

Rich in vitamin C, tomatoes are also a good source of vitamin A, and thiamin of the B group, canned as well as fresh. Cabbage, cooked or in cole slaw, is also a healthy winter dish as sauerkraut. Peas, dried green, can be stored for winter use, and beans when mature are a staple article of diet as well as being good while green.

Space seeds carefully when planting and so save seeds and labor when thinning. Don't work the ground too soon. Starting too early will spoil the soil. When a piece of earth will crumble apart in your fingers, the soil is dry enough to cultivate.

ducts of Czechoslovak origin, formerly all imported from Czechoslovakia. Hundreds of British workpeople are employed in their manufacture under the guidance of Czechoslovak experts, and supply not only the home market but export in large quantities to the dominions, colonies and other countries.

Most of these industries are directly engaged in the war effort and much of their work could not be shown. But among the exhibits were torches, as supplied to the civil defence services, stirrup pumps, and specimens of the work of building firms and metal and ore refining industries.

Also on view were embossed sheepskin for bags, soft leathers for slippers and gloves, refined types for leather clothing, including helmets for pilots; and a shoe leather produced from leather scrap which is said to be equivalent in value to the original material.

Double-faced fabric gloves are made on a complicated machine built by a British machine manufacturer from data supplied from memory by a Czechoslovak manufacturer, as it was impossible for him to take his plans with him. These gloves, it is said, are exported in large quantities to Canada and the United States. Lager beer of the Pilsner type manufactured under the supervision of a Czechoslovak master brewer was included among the exhibits.

1,200 REFUGEES TO LEAVE EUROPE SOON

provided assurances can be given that transportation facilities will be available. The sailings which the J.D.C. arranges give that assurance."

The newest group of refugees to sail brings to 66,700 the total number enabled to leave Europe since September, 1939, when war broke out, Mr. Hyman pointed out.

"Every new war development brought fresh complications in the picture," he said. "But no matter what the problem, the J.D.C. found a way to continue its evacuation program. Had refugees been permitted to become public charges, Portugal and Spain would have locked their frontiers against others seeking to use their ports of embarkation. In France, J.D.C. help to refugees keeps them out of internment camps from which it is difficult to emigrate."

The J.D.C. is the only Jewish organization which still has American representatives in Europe. They are stationed in Lisbon, where they can make the necessary arrangements with the steamship companies.

Notice About Pictures

SO MANY photographs were received for the rotogravure sections of the Passover issue of the Review that they could not all be used. Moreover, they would speak for a great deal of the available space in the New Year number if held over. For that reason the Review will begin to publish photographs regularly in the weekly issues. Pictures showing more than one person will be given the preference in order of appearance. Photographs will continue to be considered for publication.

Brotherhood father and son annual banquet, takes place Sunday evening, April 26th, Temple Community House, committee chairman, Lawrence Marks. Sisterhood will be guests of the Dorcas Guild of the Erskine and American United Church at an interfaith tea, Tuesday, April 28th. On Wednesday, April 15th, Society pledges unstinted efforts to step up production.

Written as it has been for many years by Dr. Gabriel Davidson, managing director, the report concludes: "In this gigantic task the society will not fail to play its part. The society pledges itself without reserve to use its every energy, its last resort, to meet and to help Jewish farmers meet the demands that will be made upon it and upon them in these days of fateful destiny."

The very upswing in farm income and purchasing power last year brought additional problems, Dr. Davidson wrote, asserting: "In so far as it lies in its power, the society will seek to stem unbridled expansion, to check injudicious enlargement, to help step up production, not by borrowing but by better craftsmanship, to save the farmers the pang of pain which came to so many a generation ago."

The society handled fewer refugees than in 1940—635, against 892—but "more of those who came with minds made up, not simply to explore." The refugees, no longer mainly from Germany, came from virtually everywhere; and on the society's reception benches sat physicians, lawyers, bankers, industrialists, journalists, tradesmen, clerks and professors.

Problems of farm settlement peculiar to the refugee were outlined by Dr. Davidson:

"For the usual run of farm seeker the step to the farm is a step upward, the realization of a cherished dream. For the refugee farm seeker the step is only too often the result of an awakening to sober reality and, in the light of what he has left behind, a step downward.

"Many of the emigres, accustomed to high standards of living, have turned down good farms for no other reason than that the surroundings lacked attraction, that the grounds did not have sufficient shade trees, that the rooms in the house were too small for the furniture. Those to whom money does not count can indulge in these luxuries, but such refugees are few in number."

The report also made the interesting disclosure that refugee farmers showed a more than usual tendency toward partnerships, something the society has always opposed.

The society settled ninety-eight refugee families during 1941. That raised the refugee farm settlements to 324 in twelve States apart from those refugees who became farmers without the society's aid. "The refugee farm picture," this section concluded, "continues to look bright."

Since its establishment in 1900 the J. A. S. has granted 13,842 farm loans aggregating $8,442,318 to farmers in forty States. The 1941 figures were: 376 loans granted, totaling $298,998.66; 353 loans closed, $268,489.54; 1,169 loans outstanding, $954,112.27.

U. S. Orders No Bar In Defense Industry Employment

Ten industrial concerns holding millions of dollars in war contracts were ordered by the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice to cease discriminating against available workers because of their race or religion.

The committee said that the concerns named were all in the Chicago and Milwaukee areas and that the findings were based on two days of public hearings held Jan. 19 and 20 in Chicago.

The complaints included allegations that the companies refused to employ Negroes or Jews, or both, but chiefly the former; that they had given restrictive orders to public or private employment agencies, asking for only white or only Gentile workers; that they had advertised in newspapers for help and specified "Gentile," "Protestant" or "white," or that they had refused to give workers of specified races or creeds opportunity for promotion in keeping with their qualifications.

The companies for the most part denied that they were discriminating, but in each case the committee found evidence supporting the charges.

The Chicago area companies involved are the Stewart-Warner Corporation, the Buick aviation plant at Melrose, Ill., a unit of General Motors; Bearse Manufacturing Company, Simpson Manufacturing Company and the Studebaker branch factory. Those in the Milwaukee area are the Nordberg Manufacturing Company, A. O. Smith Corporation, Heil Company, Allis Chalmers Corporation and the Harnischfeger Corporation.

Plants were directed "to give written notice to all employment agencies to which they submit orders, including the office of the United States Employment Service, advising that the plant will accept applicants for all classifications of employment without regard to race, color, creed or national origin, copies of such notices to be transmitted to the committee."

The Majestic Radio Corporation of Chicago was commended for its prompt action in correcting discriminatory practices in its hiring. According to testimony by H. A. Gates, president of Majestic, he discharged two supervisory employees after he had checked and found the committee's charges of discrimination valid.

MARRIAGES

Lerner-Vineberg

The marriage of Grace Bernice, daughter of Mrs. S. L. Vineberg and the late S. L. Vineberg, to Samuel S. Lerner, son of Saul Lerner and the late Mrs. Lerner, was solemnized on Thursday, April 16th, at eight o'clock, in the study of Shaar Hashomayim Synagogue, Rev. Dr. Herman Abramowitz officiating. Given in marriage by her brother, Edward Vineberg, the bride wore an afternoon dress of ice blue crepe, and Dubonnet and dusty pink accessories, and carried a nosegay of Dubonnet and pink roses. ORT School For Refugees In Canada Is Ready

The first ORT training school for refugees in North America is ready to open in Canada, according to official announcement by George Backer, president of the American ORT Federation. Situated in a camp for European refugees on Ile aux Noix, an island on Lake Richelieu 47 miles from Montreal, the school has an initial enrolment of 150 students in machine shop practices and operations concerned with metal work of all types, tools and fittings.

In his announcement, Mr. Backer said the ORT program has a double value, teaching trades permanently useful to the refugees and training workers who can help in producing urgently needed war material. The courses are tentatively planned for six months duration.

The school, constructed by ORT, Organization for Rehabilitation through Training, with the cooperation of the United Jewish Refugee and War Relief Agencies of Canada, is the second established in the Western Hemisphere, the first being an institution for refugees in Buenos Aires, Argentina. Addition of Canada raises to 10 the total of countries, outside the United States, where ORT maintains trade schools, workshops and farming projects.

Plans are under way for a farm of some 70 acres for poultry and cattle raising near the school. The school, a one-story frame structure of 4,800 square feet, was erected after negotiations with the government, which, according to Lieutenant Colonel R. S. W. Fordham, Commissioner of Refugee Camps, considers it "one of the most useful and constructive pieces of work that could possibly have been devised in connection with the refugee camps."

Negotiations with the Canadian Government were carried on by Louis Fitch, K.C., Montreal lawyer who is chairman, and Vladimir Grossman, secretary, of the Canadian ORT Committee; Dr. David Lvovitch, vice-president, World ORT Union; Lord Marley, deputy speaker of the House of Lords and chairman of the British ORT Parliamentary Council, and Saul Hayes of the United Jewish Refugee and War Relief Agencies, with which ORT is associated. Samuel L. Marshall of New York was the technical advisor for the American ORT Federation.

Adler, of New York, to Dr. Howard Paul Caplan, eldest son of Dr. and Mrs. Matthew Caplan, of Boston, Mass., took place on March 26th, in the crystal ballroom of the Royal York Hotel. A string ensemble provided the music and Norman Alexander sang "Because". The ceremony was performed by the bride's uncle, Rabbi Munro Adler, of Baltimore, Md., assisted by Rabbi Samuel Morganstern of Miami, Florida, cousin of the groom. The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Arnold D. Goldwin. She wore a gown of cream colored bridal satin fashioned with a long moulded basque bodice, deep square neckline, short fitted sleeves, and a full skirt sweeping into a circular train. Her veil of tulle illusion, falling to the length of her train, was caught to the head with a halo of gardenias. She had a single strand of pearls, which had belonged to her mother, and carried a cascade of gardenias. There were seven attendants, the maid of honor, Miss Jane Seigal, cousin of the bride, and the bridesmaids, Misses Millicent and Monica Orvis, Hyla Faber, Jessica Allen, Mary Epstein, and Mrs. Samuel Orvis. They were all gowned alike in replicas of the bridal gown, the maid of honor in Delft blue and the bridesmaids in pink. They had matching faille pompadour pillbox hats with tulle, and carried shower bouquets of pink and blue sweetpeas, forget-me-nots and swansonia. Dr. Leonard Lehman, of Boston, Mass., acted as best man, and the ushers were: Dr. Richard Caplan, Michael Caplan, brother of the groom, Dr. Jerome E. Morganstern, of Miami, Samuel Malkin, Ben Garfield, of Detroit, Ernest Fink, George Adler, Victor Margolus, William Lobsan, of Barrie, Ont., and Herbert Sanders of Washington, D.C. The bride's aunt, Mrs. Arnold D. Goldwin, received in a black chiffon gown etched in frosty white, tunic styled with flared peplum. Her hat was a white Baku straw cartwheel with Chantilly black veil, and she had a corsage of orchids. Mrs. Matthew Caplan, mother of the groom, received in a seafoam green gown of crepe, shirred softly through the midriff. Her flower hat was pink and green with a green veil, and she also wore sables and corsage of orchids. Mrs. Munro Adler, aunt of the bride, also received in a gown of wood violet crepe with matching jacket, a Baku straw pompadour halo with nose veil of pink, and a corsage of pink camellias. Later the bride and groom left for a honeymoon to Montreal, New York, and Miami. For travelling the bride wore a blue wool frock with a matching coat trimmed with blue fox fur revers. Her hat was a blue flower halo the accessories were of deeper blue in suede, and her corsage was of gardenias. Dr. and Mrs. Caplan will live in Boston, Mass.

The Reconstructionist Viewpoint

THE POST'S THREE-ARTICLE-PLAN

By Abraham G. Duker, Associate Editor, Of The Reconstructionist

The Saturday Evening Post three-article-plan for enlightening the American public about the Jews fills the mind of the positive, survivalist Jew with melancholy thoughts. Neither the publisher's method of promotion, nor any of the presentations nor the Jewish public's response helps to offset this feeling.

There is no legal check in a democracy on "honest" circulation stunts by publishers. Circulation campaigns based on sensational news about Jews or on appeals to the Jewish public have been tried from time to time by many general publications. The "left wing" has sinned even more in this respect than the "right wing". Stolberg's psychoanalytic verbiage in The Nation and the blood curdling "15 Leading Jews Marked for Death" in the New Masses still stick in our throat. The effects of such campaigns on the lists of permanent subscribers are doubtful. Their effect on the mentality of the more jittery among American Jews is uniformly bad.

Although the first article by Jerome Frank in the Saturday Evening Post appeared just before the Pearl Harbor attack and during the most rabidly isolationist stage of that periodical, we are willing to grant that there were no anti-Semitic motives in the mind of its publishers. Some even say, and no doubt Mr. Frank would agree, that the publication of this article might have been dictated by the desire to offset the isolationist anti-Semitic campaign by proving the impossible thesis that Jews in America are no more afraid of Hitler than are any other Americans. Whatever the motives were then, the next two articles have done little to make up for the effects of the first.

True, the article by Waldo Frank portrays the Jews as the symbolic fighters, if not the symbol of democracy. All of which is very nice; but still it fails to present the Jews as living human beings who have the right, not because of any special virtues which they may or may not have, but because of democracy's law which encourages all groups and individuals, to live and express themselves in their own ways. The third article, by Milton Mayer, projects all the more flagrant shortcomings of capitalistic morality on the Jews.

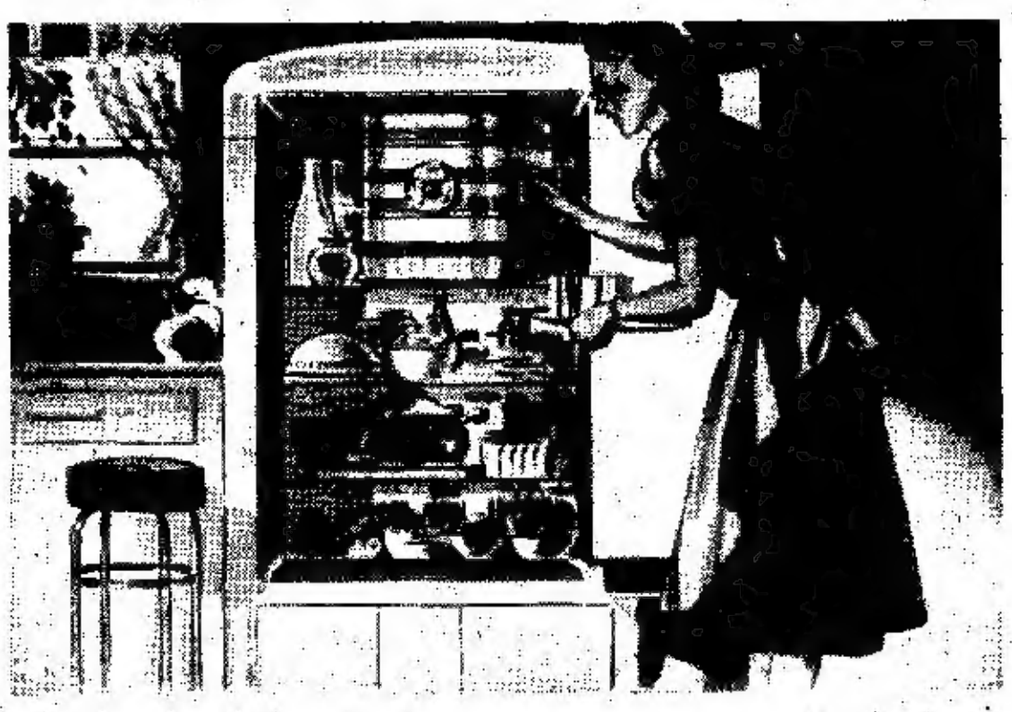
What Karl Marx stated almost a hundred years ago about Judaism from his materialistic point of view, namely that "money is the jealous God of Israel above whom there cannot be any other God," the disciple of the "idealistic" Mortimer Adler says about Jews from the anti-materialistic point of view. Karl Marx, from the standpoint of philosophical materialism, charged the Jews with being the sponsors of capitalism. He thereby paved the way for the anti-Semitic brands of "Socialism", such as Nazism. Milton Mayer, from the standpoint of philosophic idealism, likewise charges the Jews with sponsoring all the evils of capitalism. He is thus paving the way for the kind of anti-capitalist reaction of which Coughlin is the mouthpiece and which is bound to result in anti-Semitic and clerical fascism. A new world based on the ethical principles of the Judaeo-Christian tradition, the neo-Thomism which is the inspiration of Milton Mayer's article, can not be built. Neo-Thomism is an attempt to bring back medievalism and to reintroduce intolerance and religious persecution.

There is no denying that Jews have their due or undue share of the crass materialistic individuals described by Mayer, neither is there a dearth of such individuals among the Christians. If Mr. Mayer wants to cure the world of the disease of materialism, let him address himself to the world. If, however, he insists on beginning his cure with the Jews, he should have sense enough to approach them through Jewish media of public opinion. There is enough social idealism among Jews which he could depend on to help him. Social idealism is surely not the monopoly of Orthodox Jews in the Warsaw ghetto. Also in Palestine and in America there are Jews in large numbers who strive for the maintenance of human dignity and social justice. Mr. Mayer would find a return to religious values even among Jewish radicals. The fact is that his horizon is restricted and therefore he does not know his own people. The question might also legitimately be raised whether Mr. Mayer is not, like the Saturday Evening Post, after circulation and notoriety. If this is the case, he ought to apply to himself all that he said about materialism.

No more indicative of sound public opinion is the reaction of the Jewish public. The Jerome Frank article caused much commotion among the positive and clearer thinking Jews. Among the hush-hush variety, on the other hand, it gave an additional impetus to the latest fashion—the presentation of the American Jew as an American of the Mosaic faith. We may expect henceforth to meet this term more often. There was little response to the Waldo Frank article. We believe that the Jerome Frank article is still the more dangerous. The Mayer article, in which Gentile society is accused of causing Jews to become materialistic, will not produce anti-Semitism among fair-minded Gentiles. The Jerome Frank article which classifies Jews according to the degree of dejudaization introduces a certain element of impatience towards the survivalist Jew even among the most tolerant non-Jews. There is only one step from this to anti-Semitism.

There is one more aspect to be considered, and that is our own community organization. Last year's Atlantic Monthly series and the present articles in question are proof of our negligence in defending ourselves against the cultural variety of anti-Semitism. Would the Saturday Evening Post have dared to write three articles about Catholics without permitting at least one Catholic scholar, churchman, or lay leader to have his say? We believe that the answer to this question is No! As long as Jews as a group will not have one good address of a dignified, active and commonly known central representation, there is no sense blaming the Saturday Evening Post for its choice of Jewish authors.

As long as our public relations policy will insist on keeping Jews out of the news, instead of regularly presenting dignified and correct information about us in the daily and periodical press, there will always lurk the danger of sensationalism for circulation and other purposes. This is not the first time we have stated these thoughts nor will it be the last time. A few months will pass by. There will be some new sensation by Jewish self-haters or ignoramuses. We will again get excited; and we shall again forget about the matter.



BEER IS A REAL HOUSEHOLD COMMODITY

... In many well regulated homes in the Dominion, beer is now considered "a household commodity".

The fact that it has won such an enviable place as a home beverage can only be attributed to its purity and its satisfying usefulness.

Beer is nature's own product, clean and satisfying...pleasant to serve and appreciated by guests.

"Beer is the handmaid of moderation."

human beings who have retained a spiritual vision of life (if only to some limited extent) as opposed to those who have become unfaithful. Rabbi A. H. Silver, one of the few truly Jewish leaders now, expressed himself along these lines some years ago, when he told us, the Jews of this sorely tried generation, to "arouse and join forces with all men of all faiths and of all races who have remained faithful to the spiritual vision of life". Quite rightly the Jewish people is addressed, whose history hardly leaves any doubt that out of the present turmoil powers will be set free, resulting in a spiritual reconstruction of some kind. It is up to us who are living in free countries to start a genuine discourse on the questions involved, questions "not old, not new, but eternal". No panacea can be given for curing the ills and the shortcomings of our time, but surely a beginning can be made by any group in deep earnest, searching for an answer to the question of the meaning of life in our changing world.

Even amidst the very struggle of arms the eternal problem will have to be posed. We cannot afford to put it off. Let those responsible for the morale of armies and civilian populations not be forgetful of the fact, plain and established, that an hour spent in intelligent discourse of matters spiritual is of an infinitely higher "morale building value" for creating and keeping up a true fighting spirit than many hours dedicated to what else is usually arranged for in good intention. Let us Jews be the vanguard, faithful to our timeless mission.

And let us take the brother-hand where it is held out to us from a well-meaning non-Jewish quarter. Of a "common fight against the destructive gods of space, nationalism, racial arrogance and social suppression", Paul Tillich, a well-known Protestant scholar of Germany, now professor at the Union Theological Seminary of New York, spoke only recently when he raised the question: what shall be the situation of Jewry in a new world after the war? The answer, Dr. Tillich held, could not be given merely in political or sociological terms, but as a unique question it demanded a unique answer in religious terms, entailing a common fight for a new world by the minority of Christians and Jews who have the spiritual strength to go this way.

This side of inter-faith work certainly deserves every encouragement, though the present writer dare not anticipate appreciable results until the minority of Jews just spoken of has been increased in numbers by way of a fruitful inner-Jewish discourse. To emerge from the sea of doubt, nay, of indifference, of escapism, is our momentary task, now, one thousand years after Saadiah Gaon.

Jews And The Plebiscite

If we want to preserve Canada's freedom, yes, and its very existence, what is now required is total war! Thus Canada dare not be divided in the effort to crush Hitlerism. Canada dare not display divisiveness in this critical hour of danger. It must give of its full measure as a member of the United Nations in winning this war as well as the peace to follow.

Jews need hardly be reminded to go forth and cast their votes "yes" and not neglect this expression which will help strengthen the hands of the Government in the great decisions that of necessity it will be called upon to make in the decisive hours that await before the dawn of an allied victory. The great tradition of patriotism set forth by our sages of yore — "Dina d'malchuso dina" — "respect for just governmental authority" will certainly be followed by Canadian Jewish citizens now as ever before. Now, as ever, Jews in every free land stand shoulder to shoulder with non-Jewish citizens in defense of freedom and country. Theirs is the fervent prayer that speedily come the day when liberty under God will have its rebirth.

Ethics In Judaism

In accordance with an old Jewish custom, a part of every year is devoted to the reading and study of Pirke Aboth — "The Ethical Sayings Of The Fathers." This is especially practiced on the Sabbaths between Passover and Shabuoth, when the six chapters of the Talmudic ethical anthology included in the daily prayerbook are read. What a wealth of wisdom these ethical maxims contain!

The custom of such readings in synagogues and homes is most valuable, for it gives emphasis to the unique place ethics occupies in religion generally and in Judaism. The two important elements in all great religion are the ceremonial and the ethical. Judaism is a religion of righteousness and ethics is the heart of the Jewish religion.

The great exponents of the ethical life in Jewish thought were the prophets. Right action is what they demanded above Temple worship and ceremonial observances. The prophet Jaremiah in his great Temple sermon ridiculed the Jews who adhered to the Temple ritual and devoted offerings to Temple altar but neglected to practice justice and plead the cause of the widow, the orphan, the poor. The great rabbis likewise condemned those who are punctilious about ceremonial observances but neglect to fulfill the ethical demands of Judaism.

Here it is important to stress that while both the ceremonial and the ethical are important, the rabbis merely drew a distinction between the two expressions of religion. The ethical they held had to do with relationship between man and fellowman: while the ceremonial between man and The Divine. Thus the rabbis laid down the admonition that on the Day of Atonement man can not expect to find reconciliation with God after confessing sin unless he first rights the wrong he committed against fellowman. For the beginning and end of life is Gemilus Chasodim, acts of lovingkindness. Thus the great Rabbi Hillel advanced the golden rule: "What is distasteful to you, do not do unto thy neighbour."

Because the God of the Jew is a moral God, a holy God, so man must imitate God's holiness, His mercy and justice. Not so much faith as works, therefore, came to play an important part in the religious life of Israel. Few peoples on earth have such an emphasis on "Maasim Tovim", "good deeds", as the Jewish people. Thus ancient Jewish writ records the thought that on the day of judgment, man will be asked not: "What is your faith?" but, "Have you dealt honorably and faithfully with your fellowmen?"

Jewish ethics is social-minded and universal. "Separate not thyself from the community" is the great rabbinic injunction. It calls upon adherents to practice justice at all times and in all dealings with Jew as well as non-Jew.

The ethical tradition in Israel includes even the dumb animals. According to Jewish law man is not to partake of his meal unless he first gave food to his domestic animals. Pity towards all life and all living gave to Jews the motto, Zaar Ba-Ale Ha-Chayim. Thus a whole people became a society for the prevention of cruelty.

We need today a renewal of the ethical in the world. The great purpose of religion is to inspire men to moral conduct and sustain faith in righteousness. Alas, we are living at a time when the right experiences temporary defeat. All the greater, therefore, is the present-day challenge to religion.

In the war aims of 1942, we must keep before us that a new world order under God will come when new men dedicated to the ethical will be rebuilding society. Let us not blame it all on Hitler in the present world tragedy. All must share in the guilt of world collapse. Nations and individuals have dared to push aside the ethical standards of religion, hence civilization is overcome by bestiality and brutality. The hour urgently calls upon all peoples to a return to prophetic religion, to the ethical ways of life.

"Who shall ascend the mountain of the Lord?
And who shall stand in His Holy Place?
He that hath clean hands and a pure heart." (Psalms).

"Cease to do evil, learn to do good, seek justice, relieve the oppressed, judge the fatherless, plead for the widow." (Isaiah).

every friday

"Sometimes when people censure me,
I tell them without rancor
That for what it cost me to be free,
I might have had an easier."

This column selects the following, from The New Yorker magazine, as the best comment it has read on a now famous article: "After ten days of sincere effort, we are forced to admit that we couldn't make head or tail out of Milton Mayer's article in the Saturday Evening Post, but we take it that a magazine which prints an inconclusive article under the title of 'The Case Against The Jew' can fairly be accused of a snide form of anti-Semitism. However, we are here to urge tolerance toward Jew and magazine alike — in this instance, a little more, possibly, for the magazine, which, as we write, is going through the agonies of raising its price from a nickel to a dime and should not really be held responsible for everything it does. One thing is certain: the Post's action marks the end of anti-Semitism as an active force in this country. We don't know why, and nobody else we've talked to knows why, but it's a fact that lately every time the Post espouses a cause, that cause becomes dead and absurd, like a stuffed moose. Rugged Individualism, the Right to Work, America First, and Alf M. Landon will please move over and make room for the Protocols of the Elders of Zion."

The New Yorker is subtle, wise, and light-hearted and often has a great way of saying: "There, there. It's not as bad as some make it out to be." While others rave, resent, and foam at the mouth, it remains cool and keeps its sense of proportion. Allevel auf Every Friday gesagt, such a finely balanced attitude. Instead, this column takes the easy way of avoiding a stroke by refusing to read any part of the range of popular Jew articles obviously published as circulation-makers. It gave in over the Mayer article only after the sensation his writing caused, and its worst presentiments were realized. His stuff is full of cheap generalization and does him no credit. Something of what Mayer's judgment is like may be gathered from the fact that he was amazed at the public reaction to his writing. Publication of it may yet prove to have served a good purpose: maybe the magazines will let both Mayer and the Jews alone, and maybe a lot of people will let the Saturday Evening Post alone.

Life magazine starred by contrast with "Voices Of Defeat", prepared "not to frighten Americans with bugaboos but to make them mad enough to see to it that their officials take the necessary action" against those Americans who abuse free speech and spread Hitler's propaganda to knock America out of the war or end the fight against world aggression, always employing anti-Semitism, Hitler's favorite weapon.

Life magazine gives the names of men who blacken the Jews and then call President Roosevelt a Jew. It quotes such remarks from public speeches as: "The Jews and all who follow them will be crucified like rats as soon as we real Americans get together." A couple of viciously anti-Semitic publications have discovered that the V for Victory sign is a Jewish symbol and stands for "violence, vengeance, and sabotage." Pogroms for Jews of America is the idea of one editor. Much of the talk in these papers and from platforms is crackpot talk, but Life says that crackpots who spread enemy propaganda in time of war are a dangerous luxury. Along the vital Southern California coastline shrewd enemy propaganda activity eats away at civilian and military morale.

In the Chicago district, seditious groups warn of the Communist Jews, spread anti-Jewish slanders and label the war a Jewish war. The Chicago Tribune is cheered and quoted at meetings of pro-Nazi and defeatist groups. Life says. Father Charles E. Coughlin's paper, "Social Justice," accuses "the race of Jews" of having started the war by an organized boycott against the Nazis in 1933. The editor of Social Justice admits that Hitler practiced extremities against the Jews, but it was because wealthy Jews moved into Germany from other countries and purchased property with their valuable money, thus becoming the aristocrats of Germany. This paper, which gives these cold-blooded Nazi excuses for persecuting Jews, is probably the most widely read mouthpiece of this type of Nazi propaganda, says Life. Its circulation is about 185,000 and it is sold on street corners and church steps in many American cities. It published an article on Donald M. Nelson and the Jews, describing a visit of the new chairman of the U.S. War Production Board to a synagogue on Yom Kippur, which was reprinted in the anti-Semitic press. Life says there is a great deal of venom and hate in Coughlin, coming out each week in Social Justice which bears his picture and name on the front cover of every issue.

The Reverend Gerald L. K. Smith, who also lives in Detroit, and makes a fair living out of his Fascistic organization, recently gave his followers the new rallying cry of: "Christ First In America." Both Coughlin and Smith have talked with the organizers of the National Workers League, a pro-Nazi outfit which Life says is recruiting members in arms-making centers. Garland L. Alderman, its secretary, told Chairman Dies of the latter's committee in Washington, that: "We would like to ban the Jews and emphatically burn them out . . . to get rid of the Jews we will have to burn and kill them off. I have a constitutional right to say this and I am saying it . . . The Jews control the White House, the President is a Jew, his wife is a Jewess, and Jews are running Washington and the nation."

Typical of Midwest publication is Publicity whose editor told Life that "Every war this world ever had was caused by the Jews." His remedy is the same as Hitler's and Coughlin's: attack the Jews. The Rev. Gerald Winrod is one of the better known speakers. He is one of several Fundamentalist preachers who were taken to Germany and entertained at Nazi expense since Hitler came to power. He specializes in attacking "international Jew crooks." Attacks on Jews as instigators of the war mark all sorts of seditious published material which is distributed by the tens of thousands of copies. In New York, PM and the Post have been extremely vigilant in exposing pro-Nazi and defeatist organizations and there has been less such activity in New York than in most other cities, but there are small organizations that work without publicity. Lawrence Dennis is still publishing in New York the Weekly Foreign Letter, which is considered the intellectual guide of Fascist thought in the United States; subscription price, $24 yearly. Life says that some of the confidential material he received from the German Embassy referred to President Roosevelt as a Jew.

Boston got rid of the Christian Front which had virtually disappeared in New York. The day after the Pearl Harbor attack, its head, Francis P. Moran, made a public speech in which he said that the Christian Front would fight Japan but not Germany, and that: "We believe in the America of Washington, not the Jewish democracy of Roosevelt." On complaints of citizens, Boston police and Federal agents got after Moran's headquarters, seized material, and had a talk with him. Life recommends what Boston did to abate the Christian Front nuisance as something any other city could do.

Jewish defence organizations, and publications, have been recommending for a number of years what Life magazine has just done: expose the anti-Semites as enemies of America. Where Jews have urged action against the disunionists, officials have often taken the view that action would be instituted, all right, when the proper time came. But during the interim, the disunionists were, unfortunately, considered dangerous, if that, only to the Jews. In showing, even belatedly, that their poison has spread a lot deeper than that, Life magazine has rendered its country a service. Let the Saturday Evening Post go and do likewise. f.f.c.

The Task Today, One Thousand Years After Saadiah Gaon

DOUBT, INDIFFERENCE, ESCAPISM AGAIN BLOCK THE WAY

By Dr. Manfred Saalheimer, Refugee Camp, Sherbrooke, Quebec.

"My heart is sad by reason of my people, who have an impure belief and a confused idea of their religion. Some deny the truth . . . and boast of their unbelief. Others are sunk in the sea of doubt," said Saadiah Gaon (892-942) in his "Emunoth we-Deoth"—"Faith And Creed".

"Judaism is in a shocking state of disintegration . . . Tens of thousands of Jews have the impression that Judaism is nothing but a sequence of irrational and trivial observance . . . a distorted view of the faith which our fathers received," said Dr. Cecil Roth, eminent contemporary historian, in a letter on the spiritual state of Anglo-Jewry; in a recent issue of the "London Jewish Chronicle".

It has become a bit of a nuisance to commemorate the anniversaries of great historical figures by putting their dicta in the straitjacket of our contemporary thinking and then wresting from them a remark or two that "could have been made today", thus "proving" that the views of that particular personage were "up to date". Now such is not the idea which led the writer to put those two quotations at the head of the present article.

The current year of 1942 marks a millenium since one of the Great in Israel, Saadiah ben Joseph, Gaon of Sura, departed from this earth. There will be no lack of treatises, or shorter appraisals, at least, from the scholarly side in the course of the year, dealing with the exciting life story and the much ramified work of Saadiah Gaon, whom Graetz did not hesitate to describe as "the founder of scientific Judaism amongst the Rabbanites" and "the creator of religious philosophy in the Middle Ages".

If we venture a synopsis of a passage from the introduction to Saadiah's celebrated chief opus with an excerpt from a most recent utterance of a distinguished present-day writer, seemingly bearing upon an identical subject, we do it in order to point out the difference, not the similarity, of situation out of which they were penned.

Saadiah's historic feat was to have paved in his sphere the way for freedom of religious thought (just in a period when, outside, the thickest veils of medieval darkness were descending upon the world). He is unhappy because the Jews he knows "deny the truth" or are sunk in a "sea of doubt", that they anyway had "a confused idea of their religion". Again, Dr. Roth has to complain that the Jews of our day have "a distorted view of the faith which our fathers received." The statements seemingly convey identical observations. In fact, they do not.

The spiritual disintegration of our period is characterized by the very absence of certain features which had struck Saadiah's searching mind. Today, too, Jews largely do have a confused idea of their religion, but—they hardly take the trouble of denying the truth: One can be mighty complacent about things which one doesn't really care for. Theirs is not the sea of doubt either, but the sea of indifference. It is not the Jews alone who by now have lost sight of the great goals which religion has set for mankind; it is, however, they who legitimately have to take the blame, since their history can, in the words of Nahum Glatzer, be interpreted as the struggle to preserve distinct ideas of God, man, and the meaning of life in an ever changing world.

The hither-to-unheard-of-chance to be permitted to make use of one's logical and reasoning faculties and thus to be enabled to reach out into a comprehension of the ageless essence of religion, was introduced by Saadiah. Elaborated it was by someone still greater than he, by Maimonides. Tremendous reverses occurred, but no definite regression, in that ever since there were men, though few at times, who had the insight required. The potentialities accruing from modern, generally more liberal ways of thinking have not been utilized in a spiritual direction, either by Jews or Gentiles, to any sizable degree. Thus it could happen that progress failed to take on an intelligible direction at all.

In our day, in the world-wide struggle that has been on, not for years, but for decades by now, the peoples of this earth are cut right through in two fronts, made up of those
